

Gender and Development

An Oxfam Journal

Guidelines for Contributors

Gender and Development is the only journal to focus specifically on gender and development issues internationally, and to explore the connections between gender and development initiatives and feminist perspectives. Gender and Development draws on Oxfam GB's strength as a leading NGO working to promote gender equality as an end in itself, and an essential prerequisite for poverty eradication, peace and sustainable human development. Since its launch in 1993, the journal has become essential reading for all who share this vision.

Gender and Development aims to inform and improve development policy and practice through debating experience, identifying lessons, and advancing new ideas. Contributions are welcome from all involved in development initiatives: policy-makers and practitioners, researchers both inside and outside academia, and feminist activists. In recognition of common causes of poverty and marginalisation across the world, writers focus on both Southern and Northern contexts.

Gender and Development has a constituency which ranges over many disciplines, countries, and levels. We request writers to assist us in our aim of reaching the widest readership possible, while retaining intellectual rigour and factual accuracy, by using a clear, accessible style. Essential specialist and technical terms should be defined, and acronyms explained in full. In this way, complex ideas can be discussed across cultures, classes and constituencies, assisting women and men to empower themselves and determine their own development.

Guidelines for Book Reviewers

1. Reviews should be about 800-1000 words in length (or 1200-1500 words for a composite review). Please submit Word or text files by email or on disk, keeping the formatting as simple as possible. Please include page references for direct quotations, and avoid references to external material unless essential.
2. At the top of the review, please give full bibliographic details of the book in the following format:
Boelens, Rutgerd and Paul Hoogendam (eds.)
Water Rights and Empowerment
Assen: Van Gorcum, 2002, ISBN: 90 232 3764 1, 255 pp.
3. Please ensure that your name, title, and institutional affiliation appear at the bottom of the review, and include a contact and email address and email.

We welcome lively and independent reviews, but, as with all papers submitted for publication, any opinions expressed must be balanced and well substantiated. If a review is highly critical, we may offer the author a right of reply. The following questions are for your guidance only – please use them as you feel appropriate.

1. Does this book make a useful contribution to current debates on the issues it seeks to address?
2. Are the arguments convincing, clearly presented, and well substantiated?
3. What are the book's main strengths, and where does it fall short?
4. Does the analysis take account of considerations of class, race, religion, age, ethnicity, etc.?
5. Is the book aimed at a specialist or at a generalist audience? How easy is it to read in terms of content, language, and style?
6. To whom would you recommend this book, e.g. development practitioners, policy makers, development scholars, activists?

Please send your review by the specified deadline to:

Julieanne Porter

Assistant Editor

Gender and Development

jporter@oxfam.org.uk

Thank you for your time and help. You will receive one free copy of the issue of Gender and Development in which your review appears.