Aims and Scope. Neuropsychologists around the world often find themselves working as isolated specialists in private practice or on multidisciplinary clinical teams. Applied Neuropsychology offers them a community forum in which to discuss the implications of the latest neuropsychological research and theory for day-to-day practice across the broad spectrum of problems presented by aged and younger adults, adolescents, and children.

In contrast to other journals Applied Neuropsychology is solely focused on clinical applications. It publishes full-length reports of research that illuminates these, commissioned reviews of current conclusions from the scientific literature concerning the nature, course, or treatment of neuropsychological dysfunctions, articles addressing current professional, educational, and ethical concerns, brief communications, commentaries, case studies, and reviews of books and tests. A Grand Rounds section highlights everyday clinical issues. It presents interesting cases in which neuropsychological services made key contributions, as well as unusual cases or rare disorders in which neuropsychological services contribute to patient care.

Editorial Style and References. Manuscripts should be prepared according to the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA; 5th ed., 2001). References should be double spaced, with text citations corresponding accurately to the references in the reference list. Journal names must be spelled out, and chapters from edited books must have a page range provided.

Tables. Tables should follow APA format and be consecutively numbered and double spaced. Provide an explanatory title with each table; title should be intelligible without reference to text. Appropriate headings should appear for each column in the table. Units of measure should also be clearly indicated. If a table is reprinted or adapted from another source, that source should be included in a credit line.

Illustrations. Line drawings, graphs, and charts should be high-contrast black and white, professionally drawn and lettered. Lettering should be of a size that will be compatible with the text type. Figure legends, numbered consecutively, should be typed double-spaced on a separate sheet. Digital files are recommended for highest quality reproduction. They should follow these guidelines:

- 300 dpi or higher
- sized to fit on journal page
- EPS, TIFF, or PSD format only
- submitted as separate files, not embedded in text files

Color illustrations will be considered for publication; however, the author will be required to bear the full cost involved in their printing and publication. The charge for the first page with color is $900.00. The next three pages with color are $450.00 each. A custom quote will be provided for color art totaling more than 4 journal pages. Good-quality color prints should be provided in their final size. The publisher has the right to refuse publication of color prints deemed unacceptable.

Cover Letter, Permissions, and Credit Lines. In the cover letter, include the designated corresponding author's postal and e-mail addresses and phone and fax numbers.

Only original manuscripts will be considered for publication in Applied Neuropsychology. The cover letter should include a statement that the findings reported in the manuscript have not been previously published and that the manuscript is not being simultaneously submitted elsewhere.

Authors are responsible for all statements made in their work and for obtaining permission to reprint or adapt a copyrighted table or figure or to quote at length from a copyrighted work. Authors should write to the original author(s) and original publisher to request nonexclusive world rights in all languages to use the material in the article and in future editions. Include copies of all permissions and credit lines with the manuscript. (See p. 175 of the APA Manual for sample credit lines.)

Proofs and Reprints. Page proofs are sent to the designated author using Taylor & Francis' Central Article Tracking System (CATS). They must be carefully checked and returned within 48 hours of receipt. Reprints of individual articles are available for order at the time authors review page proofs. A discount on reprints is available to authors who order before print publication.
