Anxiety, Stress & Coping provides a forum for scientific, theoretically important, and clinically significant research reports and conceptual contributions. It deals with experimental and field studies on anxiety dimensions and stress and coping processes, but also with related topics such as the antecedents and consequences of stress and emotion. We also encourage submissions contributing to the understanding of the relationship between psychological and physiological processes, specific for stress and anxiety. Manuscripts should report novel findings that are of interest to an international readership. While the journal is open to a diversity of articles, it is primarily interested in well-designed, methodologically sound research reports, theoretical papers, and interpretative literature reviews or meta-analyses.
Archives of Suicide Research

Official Journal of the International Academy of Suicide Research

Archives of Suicide Research, the official journal of the International Academy of Suicide Research (IASR), is the international journal in the field of suicidology. The journal features original, refereed contributions on the study of suicide, suicidal behavior, its causes and effects, and techniques for prevention. The journal incorporates research-based and theoretical articles contributed by a diverse range of authors interested in investigating the biological, pharmacological, psychiatric, psychological, and sociological aspects of suicide.

The editors are mindful of the dichotomy between general (quantitative/nomothetic) methods of research and practice and approaches that utilize specific case studies (qualitative/idiographic). While eagerly accepting work from suicidologists situated on both sides of this division, the editors ultimately wish to cultivate a forum that attempts to reconcile and merge these oppositional modes. It is their belief that, by amalgamating the general and the specific, the field of suicidology will become a more scientific discipline - a discipline that encourages the open exchange of knowledge and techniques. And it is the mission of Archives of Suicide Research to be the primary conduit through which the results of such exchanges will be enthusiastically disseminated.

INTERNATIONAL ACADEMY FOR SUICIDE RESEARCH

The International Academy for Suicide Research is an organization that promotes high standards of research and scholarship in the field of suicidal behaviour by fostering communication and cooperation among scholars engaged in such research. A subscription to Archives of Suicide Research is a benefit of membership. To learn more, visit their website: iasr.mcgill.ca

Bereavement Care

Published in association with Cruse Bereavement Care

Bereavement Care is an international journal for all who care for the bereaved. Founded in 1982, it is published in association with the national voluntary organisation Cruse Bereavement Care.

Over the years, Bereavement Care has grown to become a unique international journal that sets a high academic and scientific standard while remaining accessible to non-academics and non-scientists. Our readers include both volunteers and professionals, from many parts of the world, who work to help bereaved people of all races and creeds. It is their need for reliable and digestible information about all aspects of bereavement that remains our raison d'être.

The journal contains original papers, articles, reviews and correspondence on all aspects of the care of people bereaved by death. The editors welcome contributions on the needs of people from different cultures, religions and philosophies. Personal experiences and case reports that add something new to our understanding have a place alongside reports of research and innovations in service and theory.
The International Journal of Forensic Mental Health is a quarterly journal devoted to research and practice in the field of forensic mental health, publishing empirical articles, descriptions of forensic programs and services, legal reviews, and case studies.

International Journal of Forensic Mental Health was established to provide an international forum for disseminating research and practical developments to forensic mental health professionals. The focus is on forensic issues such as criminal responsibility, competency or fitness to stand trial, risk assessment, family violence, and treatment of forensic clients. The journal reflects the international audience represented by the International Association of Forensic Mental Health Services.

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FORENSIC MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

The International Association of Forensic Mental Health Services (IAFMHS) is an international organization of forensic mental health workers with a focus on four major areas:

- Clinical forensic psychiatry and psychology, including family violence;
- Administrative/legal issues;
- Research in forensic mental health (civil/criminal), violence, and abuse;
- Training and education.

A subscription to the International Journal of Forensic Mental Health is a benefit of membership. To join, visit www.iafmhs.org.
In this important publication, you’ll find crucial information on vital issues surrounding aggression, maltreatment, and/or trauma. Experts in the field present findings on how to prevent these behaviors, how to help victims, and how to intervene in abusive situations using the latest research in these areas.

- child maltreatment and spouse/partner abuse
- sexual assault and sexual harassment
- assessment of victims and perpetrators
- pornography and violence toward women
- aggression in the workplace or in schools
- violence and criminal behavior
- forensic issues
- capitol punishment
- biological bases of interpersonal aggression
- preventing violence at home, school, work, or in the community
- training programs for professionals
- innovative treatment and model programs
- children exposed to violence
- war and its effects
- post traumatic stress disorder
- psychological and emotional abuse
- victimization
- traumatic effects of aggression and assault
- effects of terrorism

Members of the Division of Trauma Psychology (Division 56) of the American Psychological Association, Association of Traumatic Stress Specialist, International Society for the Study of Trauma and Dissociation, and International Association of Forensic Nurses can receive an individual print and online subscription at the special rate of US$90. The Journal of Child & Adolescent Trauma presents original research, and prevention and treatment strategies for dealing with symptoms and disorders related to the psychological effects of trauma. The journal examines intervention models directed toward the individual, family, and community; new theoretical models and approaches; and public policy proposals and innovations. With a multidisciplinary approach that draws input from the psychological, medical, social work, sociological, public health, and legal fields, the journal features research, intervention approaches and evidence-based programs, theoretical articles, specific review articles, brief reports and case studies, and commentaries on current and/or controversial topics.

Each issue of the Journal of Child & Adolescent Trauma explores:

- empirical studies on any aspect of child and adolescent trauma
- community violence or trauma prevention programs
- intervention programs and techniques, especially evidence-based practice
- long term effects of child and adolescent trauma
- biopsychosocial or bioecological approaches to child and adolescent trauma
- assessment of child or adolescent trauma
- effects of war, family or other violence, natural disasters, abuse, etc. on children and adolescents

The Journal of Child & Adolescent Trauma is an important resource for practitioners, policymakers, researchers, and academics who work with children exposed to traumatic events.
Journal of Child Sexual Abuse

Included in the Thomson Reuters Social Sciences Citation Index

Journal of Child Sexual Abuse advocates for increased networking in the sexual abuse field, greater dissemination of information and research, a higher priority for this international epidemic, and development of effective assessment, intervention, and prevention programs.

Divided into sections to provide clear information, Journal of Child Sexual Abuse covers research issues, clinical issues, legal issues, prevention programs, case studies, and brief reports, focusing on three subject groups — child and adolescent victims of sexual abuse or incest, adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse or incest, and sexual abuse or incest offenders.

Research, treatment approaches and techniques, prevention, intervention, and other programs concerning any of these groups are general categories of the published articles and brief reports. The articles emphasize applying research, treatment, and interventions to practical situations so the importance of the results will be clear.

Journal of Loss & Trauma

International Perspectives on Stress & Coping

Included in the Thomson Reuters Social Sciences Citation Index

Journal of Loss and Trauma brings together scholarship on personal losses relating to family, health, and aging issues. The journal addresses issues dealing with psychological and physical health and interpersonal losses relative to extended family, community life, and society as a whole.

In order to broaden the reader’s perspective on loss and bereavement, the journal defines loss as a major reduction in a person’s resources, whether personal, material, or symbolic, to which the person was emotionally attached. Types of loss covered include: death and dying; dissolution and divorce; loss of employment; life-threatening diseases and long-term disability; loss of possessions; homelessness; recurring and haunting memories; disenfranchisement and stigmatization; losses resulting from war and violence; and aging.

Journal of Loss & Trauma highlights common as well as differing impacts of major losses while revealing commonalities of the various healing processes. Interdisciplinary in its approach, the journal publishes empirically-oriented papers, case studies with intervention strategies, point-counterpoint discussions, theoretical analyses, essays on concepts or links among relevant fields, and therapeutic approaches. Book reviews are also regular features.

Psychosis

Psychological, Social and Integrative Approaches
Published in association with ISPS

Psychosis, an innovative journal, invites research and commentary papers on:

- evidence-based treatments including individual, family and group therapies derived from a range of models including psychodynamic, cognitive-behavioural and systemic, and from a range of disciplines including nursing, psychology, social work, psychiatry, occupational therapy, art therapy etc.
- descriptions of psychotherapy and first person accounts of psychosis and of experiences using mental health services
- the integration of psychological and social understandings and treatment approaches into all phases of recovery
- training and knowledge of mental health professionals in psychological and psycho-social interventions in the treatment and prevention of psychosis
- conceptual analysis and ethical considerations related to diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation issues

Psychosis: Psychological, Social and Integrative Approaches fills an important gap in mental health literature, namely research focused on the psychological treatments of psychosis (e.g. cognitive-behavior therapy, psychodynamic therapy, family therapy etc.) and the psycho-social causes of psychosis (e.g. poverty, drug abuse, child abuse and neglect, distressed families, urban living, discrimination, rape, war combat etc.).
Residential Treatment for Children & Youth

The Official Journal of the American Association of Children’s Residential Centers

Residential Treatment for Children & Youth provides research and case studies to help you plan and assess specialized programs for treatment of substance abuse, dual diagnosis, severe emotional disturbance, and sexual offenders, as well as for children who have suffered maltreatment and abuse. In-depth clinical papers focus on particular models of milieu or individual treatment, including psychodynamic, cognitive-behavioral, behavioral, psychoeducational, peer-culture, and other approaches. Moreover, practical articles address the specific management and administrative issues that beset residential care homes. Case studies suggest new ways to manage agency change and handle clinical paradigm shifts, as well as establish community networks, undertake innovative funding efforts, and maintain necessary staff stability.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF CHILDREN’S RESIDENTIAL CENTERS

The American Association of Children’s Residential Centers (AACRC) brings professionals together to advance the frontiers of knowledge pertaining to the spectrum of therapeutic living environments for children and adolescents with behavioral health disorders. To join AACRC, go to www.aacrc-dc.org.
Victims & Offenders is a peer-reviewed journal that provides an interdisciplinary and international forum for the dissemination of new research, policies, and practices related to both victimization and offending throughout the life course. Our aim is to provide an opportunity for researchers -- both in the United States and internationally -- from a wide range of disciplines (criminal justice, psychology, sociology, political science, economics, public health, and social work) to publish articles that examine issues from a variety of perspectives in a unique, interdisciplinary forum. We are interested in both quantitative and qualitative research, systematic, evidence-based reviews, and articles that focus on theory development related to offenders and victims. The journal is published quarterly and each issue will include original research and an “opinion” section highlighting critical issues in the areas of victimization and offending.

SPECIAL RATES

Members of the International Association of Forensic Nurses can receive an individual print subscription at the special rate of US$81. To take advantage of this offer, email societies@tandf.co.uk.
Vulnerable Children and Youth Studies

An International Interdisciplinary Journal for Research, Policy and Care

Vulnerable Children and Youth Studies is an essential peer-reviewed journal analyzing psychological, sociological, health, gender, cultural, economic, and educational aspects of children and adolescents in developed and developing countries. This international publication forum provides a much-needed interdisciplinary focus on vulnerable children and youth at risk, specifically in relation to health and welfare issues, such as mental health, illness (including HIV/AIDS), disability, abuse, neglect, institutionalization, poverty, orphanhood, exploitation, war, famine, and disaster. Gathering scholarly work from a multisectoral field, the journal offers critique, analysis, and insight with regard to vulnerable children and youth in a range of settings, and aims to be widely consulted for cutting-edge research as well as effective policy and intervention.
Work & Stress

Published in Association with the European Academy of Occupational Health Psychology

Advancing Social Work Practice with the Military

With the United States’ involvement in numerous combat operations overseas, the need for civilian social workers with the clinical skills necessary to work with members of the military returning from combat, as well as their families, has never been more critical. In this practical and important book, each chapter is written by specialists in a particular area devoted to the care of service members and includes case material to demonstrate assessment and intervention approaches. The reader is introduced to the world of the military and the subsequent development of mental health services for returning men and women. Chapters look at special populations of service members with specific needs based directly on their experience in the military, discussing post-traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injury, sexual harassment and assault during their service, and the physiology of the war zone experience. The challenges faced by reintegrating service men and women are explored in detail and include family issues, suicide, and substance use disorders. A section on services available to returning service members looks at those offered by the Veterans Administration and at the use of animal-assisted interventions. The book concludes with a section devoted to unique concerns for the practitioner and explores ethical concerns they may face and their own needs as clinicians working with this population.

Treating Self Destructive Behaviors in Trauma Survivors

This is a book for clinicians who specialize in helping trauma survivors and, through the course of treatment, find themselves unexpectedly confronted with client disclosures of self-destructive behaviors, including self-mutilation and other manifestations of deliberately “hurting the body” such as bingeing, purging, starv¬ing, substance abuse and other addictive behaviors.

Arguing that standard safety contracts are not effective, the book introduces vi¬able treatment alternatives, assessment tools, and new ways of understanding self-destructive behavior using a strengths-based approach that distinguishes between the “experimental” Non-Suicidal Self-Injury (NSSI) that some teenagers occasionally engage in, and the self-destructive behaviors that are repetitive and chronic. It also explores a cycle of behavior and uses case studies to show clini¬cians how to personalize the cycle with clients and form a template for treatment. In its final sections the book focuses on counter-transferential responses and the different ways in which therapists can work with self-destructive behaviors and avoid vicarious traumatization by adopting tools and strategies for self-care.
