Call for contributions to a HERD special issue on “Scholarship of Teaching”

Higher Education Research & Development is currently calling for contributions to its special edition on “Scholarship of Teaching”

This special issue aims to focus on how the Scholarship of Teaching is enacted at the institutional level.

This could include papers for instance on:

- institutional supports for SoT and their impact
- rewards for SoT and their impact
- criteria for SoT
- standards for SoT
- impact of Carrick and current awards on SoT
- impact of national teaching awards on SoT
- implications of SoT for mentoring and academic development

All papers need to adhere to HERD requirements as outlined at www.tandf.co.uk/journals/herd. Please click on the ‘Instructions for Authors’ link.

Contributions are due by May 15th 2009 and are to be submitted directly to Dr Iris Vardi, Guest Editor for this special issue, at i.vardi@curtin.edu.au

You are also welcome to contact Dr Vardi with any queries or ideas for papers that you may wish to submit with regards to this issue.
