

Call for Papers
Medicine, Conflict and Survival

Editors:

Alan Ingram, Department of Geography, UCL
Maria Kett, Leonard Cheshire Disability and Inclusive Development Centre, UCL
Simon Rushton, Centre for Health and International Relations, Aberystwyth University

Medicine, Conflict and Survival is an international journal for all those interested in health aspects of violence and human rights. Addressing a variety of themes, the journal seeks to engage relevant academic debates while remaining accessible to a broader audience. It covers:

- The causes and consequences of war and group violence.
- The health and environmental effects of war and preparations for war, especially from nuclear, radiological, chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction.
- The effects of war and preparations for war on health and welfare services and the distribution of global resources.
- The abuse of human rights, its occurrence, causes and consequences.
- The ethical responsibility of health professionals in relation to war, social violence and human rights abuses.
- Non-violent methods of conflict resolution.
- Medical and humanitarian aid in conflict situations.
- Relationships between the environment, development and global security.
- The roles and responsibilities of governments and of international governance in reducing the risk of violent conflict.

Medicine, Conflict and Survival (originally published under the title of Medicine and War) was founded in 1985 and is published quarterly by Routledge. Now under new editorship, the journal continues to play an active role in debates around health, peace and violence.

Submissions:

The Editors welcome submission of research articles (max. 8,000 words) or commentaries (max. 2000 words). Submissions for consideration should be original contributions, relevant to the aims and scope of the journal, and should not currently be under consideration for publication elsewhere. Research articles are subject to peer review and must present original analysis and contextualize their contribution to existing knowledge and debates. Commentaries may offer (but are not limited to) reflections on current events, interventions in debates, personal viewpoints, field reports and preliminary research results. They should also contain appropriate contextualization and analytical reflection to clarify their relevance to the journal. Commentaries are subject in the first instance to editorial review, but where appropriate the editors will seek guidance from relevant experts. All submissions must follow the journal's style of presentation and referencing.

Further guidelines for authors can be found at the journal's website:

<http://www.tandf.co.uk/journals/mcs>. Submissions should be sent by email to the Editors at the following addresses: a.ingram@ucl.ac.uk, m.kett@ucl.ac.uk, sbr@aber.ac.uk

Call for Papers: Special Issue: Health, peace and survival in a nuclear world