Computer Assisted Language Learning

Edited by Jozef Colpaert - LINGUAPOLIS, University of Antwerp, Belgium

Computer Assisted Language Learning (CALL) leads the field in its dedication to all matters associated with the use of computers in language learning (L1 and L2), teaching and testing. It provides a forum to discuss the discoveries in the field and to exchange experience and information about existing techniques. The scope of the journal is intentionally wide-ranging and embraces a multitude of disciplines.

CALL publishes original contributions on

- Research Methodologies
- Language Learning and Teaching Methods
- Language Testing Systems and Models
- The Four Skills
- SLA
- HCI
- Language Courseware Design
- Language Courseware Development
- Curriculum Integration
- Evaluation
- Teacher Training
- Intelligent Tutoring
- New Technologies
- The Sociocultural Context
- Learning Management Systems

All articles are peer reviewed by an international panel of experts in the field, are accepted from contributors world wide and reflect developments in the field globally.

The editor also welcomes expressions of interest from colleagues who would like to guest co-edit a special issue with the support of members of our editorial team.

Recent themes include:

- CALL software design and development
- Evaluation of learner - computer interaction
- Computer assisted pronunciation training
- Interactive whiteboard technology
- Context-sensitive feedback in CALL

Papers should normally be around 5000 words in length, but longer or shorter articles will be considered. Papers should be original. Manuscripts should be sent electronically to Jozef Colpaert (Editor).
