

Call for Papers
Global Economic Review

Special Issue on Finance and Economic Development in China

Global Economic Review, a SSCI-listed international journal, is soliciting papers for a special issue. The theme is “Finance and Economic Development in China”, and several selected papers and a couple of invited papers will be published in the special issue. One of the key topics addressed by the special issue will be the overall relationship between financial system and economic development, focusing on the roles of banks, stock market, FDI, venture capitals and etc. However, papers analyzing the various sources and policy models of the Chinese economic development will also be welcomed.

Authors of a few selected papers will be invited to Korea to deliver special lectures on their topics. If interested, please send an extended abstract (500 words or more) and the affiliation details of the corresponding author by August 1, 2011 to the following email address: ger@yonsei.ac.kr (subject line: Submission to GER special issue).

Contributing authors will be selected through a rigorous review of submitted abstracts. The notification of acceptance will be sent in August 2010. Once accepted, the final draft of paper should be submitted through email (ger@yonsei.ac.kr) by December 2011. If you have any question related to the special issue, please contact the Editor on the email address listed above.

For further information about GER please visit the journal homepage at:

www.tandf.co.uk/journals/rger