NOW INVITING SUBMISSIONS

Intellectual History Review (IHR) is a forum for the Anglo-American and European intellectual history community, promoting the work and aims of the ISIH as well as the study of intellectual history more generally. As well as articles, IHR regularly publishes literature surveys, and essay reviews of current work in intellectual history and related historical areas.

IHR will appear tri-annually in March, July and November. The first issue will be published in March 2007.

The journal construes 'intellectual' in the most inclusive and comprehensive sense, focusing primarily on intellectual history from the sixteenth century to the present. It publishes papers addressing the history of philosophy, religion, science, anthropology, psychology and the social sciences and other relevant intellectual formations.

Articles which emphasise the grounding of intellectual work in social, cultural and historical context are encouraged. The journal encourages historical reflection on the formation and development of intellectual history as a discipline and publishes studies which review the work and achievements of individual intellectual historians. It also publishes articles discussing methodological issues, historiographical reflections on the relationship between intellectual history and cognate or competing historical perspectives such as cultural history, the history of ideas and the history of philosophy.

Contributions, whether papers or discussion notes, should be sent as electronic attachments to the Editor at: s.clucas@bbk.ac.uk. Please consult with the editor if you are unable to submit material electronically:

Papers, including literature surveys and review articles should be 5,000 to 10,000 words. Please contact the editor first if you wish to submit material that falls outside this guideline. All papers submitted to the journal are subject to independent and anonymous peer review, and should be prepared accordingly.
