New Review of Information Networking

New Review of Information Networking welcomes contributions on the role of networking in developing innovative learning and teaching agendas, e-learning, intellectual property issues in the networked environment, information literacy and social networking. Contributions from all education sectors are encouraged.

Proposals from new authors and researchers will be very welcome. Currently the journal receives few contributions from outside the higher education sector and contributions from other sectors e.g. secondary education will be welcomed. Texts submitted should meet the journal's scholarly requirements but written in an accessible style.

Submissions should be sent to:-
