

Planning Theory & Practice

Call for papers for the re-launched Reviews Section

We are excited to announce that Planning Theory & Practice has recently re-launched its Reviews Section. It will now include Policy & Planning Briefs alongside its current lively Book Reviews. The Editors invite contributions to this new section of between 1,500 and 2,000 words in length. These articles can include:

- (1) critical insights and analysis of key policy developments and debates; and
- (2) analysis of spatial plans based on describing the plan's context, its aims and content, the planning process, and an illustration or map.

Policy & Planning Briefs should have an international relevance and appeal.

Book reviews should normally be between 800 and 1,000 words. The review should give the journal audience a concise summary and offer a critical assessment of the book's content. We also welcome articles that re-evaluate 'classic' planning texts within the context of a more recent publication.

Planning Theory & Practice provides an international focus for the development of theory and practice in spatial planning and a forum to promote the policy dimensions of space and place. Published four times a year, the journal publishes original articles and review papers from both academics and practitioners with the aim of encouraging more effective, two-way communication between theory and practice.

Reviews or suggestions for reviews should be emailed directly to the Reviews Editor, Mark Scott, at: mark.scott@ucd.ie.

For further details or guidelines for reviews, please see www.tandf.co.uk/journals/RPTP or contact Mark Scott.