Call for papers for a special issue of Health Care for Women International: Global Health Issues of Aging Women

Health Care for Women International (HCWI) is a critically acclaimed international journal published by Routledge/Taylor and Francis and is the official journal of the International Council on Women's Health Issues – www.icowhi.com. Now published twelve times a year and in its 36th year of publication, HCWI provides a unique interdisciplinary platform for challenging and thought-provoking research on health care and related issues that concern women.

Every year, the Editor of HCWI will publish a special issue on Global Health Issues of Aging Women as older women’s health issues receive relatively little attention.

While today we recognize that women’s health is the key to socio-economic progress and development, many older women came of age at a time when women’s health was only a priority with regard to fertility. Access to quality care for older women in many parts of the world remains elusive. The Editor seeks original papers to offer insights to strengthen our understanding of the dynamics and drivers of health and wellbeing among older women as well as innovative practices for older women that help sustain their social contributions to societies. Authors are encouraged to view the editorial published in Volume 29:1 to learn more about the international appeal.

Topics of interest for this special issue include:

- evidence-based practice interventions;
- aging and sexuality;
- care-seeking practices;
- alternative lifestyles;
- violence against older women;
- contributions of older women to the health and well-being of others;
- psychological challenges;
- chronic health conditions;
- and ethical such as the potential for rationing health care on the basis of age.

Research designs generating theory when employing quantitative, mixed method or qualitative analyses are welcomed.
