

“Hello and welcome to Globalizations journal.

Globalizations is a pioneering journal that has been shaping and defining the field of globalization studies and globalization research and is now moving into its seventh year of publication. We sponsor innovative scholarship, we are seeking to be at the cutting edge of knowledge construction in the field of globalization studies. The journal is multidisciplinary throughout in all its endeavours.

It’s a multidisciplinary journal which invites contributions from all the main social sciences, including environmental studies and public health studies. The journal is very concerned with contemporary and future relevance and addresses a whole number of crucial global issues in a variety of dimensions.

As in the title of the journal – Globalizations – we regard the concept as open, not pre-defined, and not having any singular theory or perspective so the journal is inherently heterodox and pluralistic and inclusive. It is also committed to being socially and politically engaged meaning that we wish to invite scholars who want to make a difference in the world.

And so we invite you to contribute to the journal as a reader, by citing articles in the journal, telling others about the journal and especially contributing your work as a scholar. We are open to all regions of the world and we invite work from young scholars.”

Barry K. Gills, Editor of Globalizations
