

CCJRP Book Review

Guidelines for Contributors

The book review section is dedicated to reviews of current books and other media of interest to CCJRP readers. All reviews are solicited by the editors. Individuals who wish to volunteer to be reviewers should contact the Book Review Editor, Dr. Beverly L. Bower at beverly.bower@unt.edu.

CCJRP publishes both reviews of individual books/media works and review essays. Reviews of individual works may total up to 1,000 words. Review essays are articles that examine in depth one or more works related to a single topic. Review essays are generally between 1,000 and 2,000 words in length.

If you have been invited by the editors to submit a review or review essay to CCJRP, please follow these guidelines:

1. Reviews should:
  - Describe the subject, purpose, and scope of the book.
  - Outline the major topics and themes covered in the work.
  - Provide a detailed assessment of the author's main line of reasoning.
  - Analyze whether the author has provided convincing evidence for his/her conclusions.
  - Discuss and evaluate particular strengths or weaknesses of the work (e.g. methodology employed, logic, scope).
  - Indicate the centrality of the work to the study of community colleges and/or postsecondary education.
2. In addition to the above, review essays should provide an in depth synthesis of the works being reviewed, comparing and contrasting the works in detail to one another and in relationship to the topic that ties them together, and placing them in the wider context of educational literature and current discussion.
3. Every manuscript should begin by citing the work/s to be reviewed, with full bibliographic information including authors (include first names), copyright date, full title and any subtitle, place of publication, publisher, number of pages, ISBN Number. Pricing information is not needed. For example,

Townsend, Barbara K. (Ed.). (1999). Two-year colleges for women and minorities: Enabling access to the baccalaureate. New York, NY: Falmer Press. Pp. xii + 256. ISBN 0-81533-173-8

Decisions on acceptance for publication are made by the editors, who may solicit input from members of the editorial board and other readers. Publication of reviews depends on the editors' judgment that the manuscript has satisfactorily addressed the guidelines listed above. Reviews solicited should be completed by the agreed upon deadline. Failure to meet such deadlines removes any obligation to publish the manuscript, although this decision remains at the editors' discretion.
