New Partnership between the Center for Strategic and International Studies and Routledge

Routledge Journals and the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) are proud to announce a new publishing partnership.

In 2009, Routledge will become the publisher of The Washington Quarterly.

Dr Alexander T.J. Lennon, Editor-in-Chief of The Washington Quarterly, commented: “The Washington Quarterly is delighted to begin partnering with Routledge, whose global reach and array of services will be invaluable to further disseminate the ideas of our authors and their diverse perspectives from a variety of countries. This collaboration will allow us to provide high-quality and timely insights on geostrategic changes and their policy implications to an increasingly wide array of readers around the world.”

Dr David Green, Global Publishing Director of Routledge Journals, said: “Routledge is honoured to be awarded the publishing contract for The Washington Quarterly, an essential source of incisive, independent thinking that is highly valued around the world and published out of one of the world’s pre-eminent international policy institutions. Our partnership with CSIS reinforces Routledge’s position as the preferred publishing partner of the major policy-related research institutions in International Affairs, offering benefits such as global sales reach, innovative publishing services, and a state-of-the-art online platform to our partner bodies, authors and readers.”

About the Center for Strategic and International Studies

At a time of new global opportunities and challenges, CSIS provides strategic insights and policy solutions to decisionmakers in government, international institutions, the private sector, and civil society. A bipartisan, nonprofit organization headquartered in Washington, DC, CSIS conducts research and analysis and develops policy initiatives that look into the future and anticipate change.
